Detailed description: The image shows the Eiosis E2DeEsser V1 software interface. At the top, there's a header with navigation icons, the plugin name 'Eiosis E2DeEsser', and buttons for 'SAVE', 'SAVE AS', and 'A > B'. Below the header is a spectrogram of a vocal track, showing frequency content over time. The main interface is a light-colored panel with various controls. On the left, there's a 'mode' dropdown set to 'SOLO VOCAL' and a 'bypass' button. Below these are two large knobs for 'sensitivity' and 'amount'. Further down are four smaller knobs for 'sibilants' (with 'auto' and 'smooth' options), 'gain', and 'dry/wet'. On the right side, there's a frequency response graph with a logarithmic x-axis (100, 200, 500, 1k, 2k, 5k, 10k, 20k) and a y-axis for gain (-6 to +6). The graph shows three curves: a blue curve (input), a white curve (EQ bypass), and a red curve (EQ). The red curve shows a significant dip at approximately 5kHz. At the bottom, there are buttons for 'idle', 'voiced', 'sibilants', and 'zoom'.
